Indianapolis, June 6 .- Travelers and all connected with railroads will be interested in the following decision of the Indiana Supreme Court, in the case of Charles S. Graham against the T H. and I. Company, for damages. The Putnam Court found for the plaintiff, and an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, when the judgment was reversed. Below is the finding:

This was an action by the appellee for damages for personal injuries. The facts were, in substance, that the appellee started to walk on the appellant's railway track from reecastle to Greencastle Junction; that he passed the depot at Greencastle, and knew that it was about time for the train to go over the road over which he started to walk. The appellee was seen by the fireman and engineer some 300 feet in advance of the train, and supposed that he would leave the track. The appellee did not, however, heed the approach of the train, and was struck and injured, and for the purposes of this decision it may be said that there was evidence tending to show that no signals of warning were given before the appellee was struck. His Honor reviews the facts at length, and as appellee went on the track without looking or listening for approaching trains and without exercising any care whatever for his safety, he was guilty of such negligence as precluded a recovery. even though the injury had occurred at a crossing where the appellee migh rightfully be; that appellee was on the track as a trespasser, and no kind of care on his part would have rendered his presence there lawful, and that in such case the company is not liable on the ground of negligence in running and management of its trains; that in a case like this, where contributory negligence may be a defense, such defense is not controlled by the degree of negligence that may be charged on the company, whether slight, ordinary or gross. Negligence, whether charged in one degree or another, is still negligence; and when the company is charged with nothing but negligence, contributory negligence is a defense. The terms "recklessly," with gross negligence, and "wantonly" mean less than wilfulness, and nothing more than negligence in a case of this character, and the presump-tion is that an able-bodied man, trespassing on the company's track, will leave it before coming in collision with a moving train. On this presumption, those in charge of the train have a right to act, at least until it is apparent that on account of some infirmity, the tresspasser is not able to look after his own safety.

A Seven-Year-Old Boy Kills His Fourteen-Year-Old Brother.

TROY, N. Y., June 6 .- Mr. and Mrs. Martens, of this city, went out to visit a friend, leaving at home their two sons, Herman, aged fourteen years, and Theodore, aged seven years. Soon after they had gone Herman lit a cigarette and threw himself on the sofa. While he was smoking his little brother took his father's revolver from a burean drawer and, approaching, carelessly pointed it at Herman. The weapon was discharged, making an ugly hole in the boy's neck, and the blood spurting into Theodore's face.

Herman ran into the street and fell exhausted on the sidewalk. When medical assistance arrived the wounded lad was partially revived.

His suffering was terrible, and he prayed to die. Little Theodore did not seem to realize the terrible tragedy, but kept saying: "I didn't know it was loaded-I didn't mean to shoot my brother."

Being but seven years of age he was not arrested, and all believe his story, that he did not think the pistol was loaded.

Innovation by the United Presby-terians.

PITTSBURG, June 6 .- The United Presbyterians, in annual session, pronounced in favor of the introduction of instrumental music to their services. The discussion of the subject was a very heated one, and after the ote over forty clergymen signed and presented a formal protest. Among those objecting to the organ as an adjunct to religious exercises were a number of the most eminent divines in the denomina-

Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs : none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried Aver's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the Pectoral a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your Cherry Pectoral saved me. Horace Fairbrother."

Croup. - A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY-PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA-GEDNEY."
